The business has been trading under the current owner for 17 years, providing a selection of men's clothing and accessories, catering to a variety of needs from business wear to casual weekend outfits, special occasions, and practical workwear from respected brands such as R.M.Williams, Thomas Cook, Back-Bay, Bridgeport, and Bisley Workwear.

The boutique's strength lies in its commitment to personalised service, fostering a dedicated clientele and a solid reputation for customer satisfaction. Despite its success, one notable opportunity for growth lies in its current lack of an online presence, which presents a valuable chance for a new owner to expand the business digitally, potentially increasing its reach and sales channels significantly.

Situated in a community known for its charm and high foot traffic, the store enjoys visibility and accessibility. The sale of Town & Country Menswear is an attractive proposition for anyone passionate about fashion and looking for a turnkey operation with a strong market presence, a loyal customer base, and significant growth potential.
